WORKSHEETS

Who defends the human rights defenders?

Human rights

All countries of the world have agreed that everyone in the world whether you are a man or a woman, young or old, poor or rich and no matter what skin color, has the same rights. This agreement was made in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights on the 10th of December 1948 (UDHR). The rights named in the UDHR are called human rights.

The logo of the UDHR

In this short YouTube-movie some of these human rights are mentioned:

Human Rights - Ministry of Foreign Affairs

Assignment

1. What human rights do you recognize in the movie?
2. What other human rights that were not mentioned in the movie do you know?

You probably already know that not everyone respects human rights. In that case, we speak of human rights violations. Some violations are easy to prevent, others are more difficult to find a solution for.

A human rights violation that can easily be prevented, is torture. If the government of a country prohibits torture and enforces the law, torture can be banned.

Assignment

3. Give another example of a human rights violation that can easily be prevented.
4. Give an example of a human rights violation that cannot be prevented easily.

Prohibition on torture

Freedom of expression

One of the most important human rights is freedom of expression. If you cannot express your opinion, you cannot oppose human rights violations either.

Martin Luther King was publicly opposing discrimination of people with a dark skin color. His only 'weapon' was freedom of expression. Partly because of his famous speech 'I have a dream' (in front of about a million people) he realized equality of law for everyone in his country.

In some countries you have to be careful in the way that you act or about the things that you say. That is especially true for people with the following professions:

- Artist
- Journalist
- Moviemaker
- Union leader

Protest of a union in Belgium

A piece of art of Chinese artist Yue Minjun

5. Explain for each of the four professions mentioned above why these people should be extra careful according to you.
6. What do these professions all have in common?
7. Name a profession -not mentioned above- that could also be in the category of extra vulnerable professions.
8. Write your own text for a protest against a current wrong on the protest sign of Yue Minjun.

Human rights defenders

9. Write down as many words as you can that come to your mind when you think about 'human rights defender'. Does a person like that have any special characteristics according to you? If so, which ones?

A human rights defender is not superman. What is a human rights defender according to you?

10. Try to think of your own definition of 'human rights defender' together with your neighbour.

A 'human rights defender' is someone who .....

Extra vulnerable

Human rights defenders stand up for human rights, individually or in an organisation, without using violence. Unfortunately they cannot always do that in freedom. Protection of civilians is most needed in times of armed conflict or war. A human rights defender who exposes violations committed by political leaders or armed militias are often accused of partisanship and get threatened.

Since 9-11 a lot of countries adopted rules to oppose terrorism. This often means that the work of human rights defenders is criminalized.

Amnesty asks special attention for female human rights defenders, who often work under more difficult conditions than men and are extra vulnerable because of that. They are often not taken seriously by their surrounding society because of prevailing about women.

Some governments see the work of human rights organisations of women as not important and unlawful.

Female human rights defenders are more at risk to be threatened because of their gender and are more likely to become victim of sexual harassment and rape.

Amnesty launched a special application in 2014 that human rights defenders can use to call out for help, if they are at risk of being kidnapped, attacked or tortured. The Panic Button-app is a silent alarm and can be activated in case of emergency.

By pressing the button, fellow-activists are alarmed if a colleague is in danger. This will fasten the process of providing help. In the first hours of the arrest, the human rights defender's network can act fast to get their colleague released. For example they can overwhelm the police station with phone calls, organise a protest or warn lawyers and organisations like Amnesty.

11. What is meant by 'criminalizing human rights defenders'?
12. In what way the Panic Button-app works, is explained by the above pictures. What is missing, is English explanation. Write the five steps down together with you neighbour.

Assignment

Who defends human rights defenders?

Human rights defenders stand up for the rights of others. This often puts them in danger. They also need protection.

13. Who should protect human rights defenders according to you? Explain.

Different international organisations stand up for the rights of human rights defenders. The two most important ones are the United Nations and the European Union.

United Nations

In 1999 the UN adopted the Declaration on Human Rights Defenders*. The official name of the declaration* already shows that everyone has an obligation to protection human rights defenders.

Article 12 of the declaration pays special attention to the obligations of States:

Article 12

1. Everyone has the right, individually and in association with others, to participate in peaceful activities against violations of human rights and fundamental freedoms.
2. The State shall take all necessary measures to ensure the protection by the competent authorities of everyone, individually and in association with others, against any violence, threats, retaliation, de facto or de jure adverse discrimination, pressure or any other arbitrary action as a consequence of his or her legitimate exercise of the rights referred to in the present Declaration.
3. In this connection, everyone is entitled, individually and in association with others, to be protected effectively under national law in reacting against or opposing, through peaceful means, activities and acts, including those by omission, attributable to States that result in violations of human rights and funda-

* Officially: Declaration on the Right and Responsibility of Individuals, Groups and Organs of Society to Promote and Protect Universally Recognized Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms

European Union

In 2004 the EU adopted the Guidelines on Human Rights Defenders. Embassies of member States and EU-missions must provide protection to human rights defenders by visiting, observing processes and where needed undertake action against governments. They must also help guarantee that human rights defenders have free access to (foreign) financial donations.

14. The UN Declaration and the EU Guidelines (it already explains in the name) have one important disadvantage. What could that be? What could the UN and the EU do to further strengthen the protection of human rights defenders?

Next to States, private organisations can offer help to human rights defenders. We name a few, but there are more!

Amnesty International

One of the main tasks of Amnesty International is the protection of human rights defenders. Amnesty realizes that by protests, publicity, arranging visits and contacts, education and training, lobbying and sometimes financial support.

For example by supporting protests and by writing letters, you can participate yourself in the protection of human rights defenders.

#Idefund

#Idefund is an initiative of the delegation of the EU in the UN.

The goal of #Idefund is to show solidarity to human rights defenders and to improve their commitment and work for human rights for people all over the world. Maybe you have seen this on social media, like Facebook (<https://www.facebook.com/idefund>). You can support the initiative yourself by social media.

Justice and Peace

This Dutch organisation stands up for the protection and training of human rights defenders. Justice and Peace created several projects that support the work of human rights defenders.

Justice and Peace Netherlands

- The Hague Training Course provides training on digital security mechanisms and policy influencing.
- Connet2Protect connects human rights defenders with members of the parliament, lawyers and journalists.
- Temporary Relocation temporarily relocates human rights defenders from Africa and Asia in those continents.
- Shelter City is a European project. You can read more about that on the next page.

15. Next to legal rules - for example by referring to antiterrorist regulations - the movie mentions another way to obstruct the work of human rights defenders. What is that?
16. Which four ways of threatening a human rights defender are named in the movie?

Shelter City Nijmegen

The movie of Justice and Peace showed that human rights defenders can be put to silence, arrested and tortured and sometimes even disappear. If their situation allows it, they can benefit a lot from temporary shelter. Based on an initiative of the European Parliament, Shelter Cities have been created in all of Europe.

How does Shelter City work?

Shelter City started by recruiting cities in Europe. Shelter Cities in the Netherlands (or soon to be) are: Amsterdam, Den Haag, Groningen, Maastricht, Middelburg, Nijmegen en Utrecht. After The Hague and Middelburg, Nijmegen was the third Shelter City of the Netherlands.

The next step is the selection of human rights defenders. They are chosen by a national selection committee, composed of representatives of Justice and Peace, the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, de Faculty of Law of the University of Amsterdam, Hivos en Free Press Unlimited.

Every Shelter City provides a human rights defender a safe environment for three months. In that period, the human rights defenders can recharge so that he or she can return with new found energy.

The human rights defenders will go back to their own country, empowered by a larger network and with more knowledge to better do their work. If desired, the human rights defenders can participate in education or training. Meetings with politicians in The Hague and Brussels will also be arranged.

An interaction should be created between the human rights defenders and civilians of the Shelter Cities. He or she will be part of events in the city (like Music Meeting and the Four Day Marches in Nijmegen). In their turn, the human rights defenders can participate in debate or have a speech on human rights in his or her country.

The human rights defender 'from Nijmegen'

Mamikon advocates for the rights of LGBT people in Armenia and particularly HIV/AIDS issues in his country. Many LGBT people face harassment and violence and the Armenian government refuses to investigate these cases. Because he regularly speaks out on various human rights issues on social media and in press interviews, Mamikon himself is also constantly harassed online and in person. He is often the target of smear campaigns and hate speech.

In Nijmegen, Mamikon hopes to have time to rest and gain new energy. He also hopes to have the opportunity to speak publicly in front of a Dutch audience about his work and the human rights situation in his country.

17. Shelter City does not just have advantages. What disadvantage(s) of the Shelter City project could you think of?
18. Imagine you would be in Mamikon's position. What practical matters could come up for a human rights defenders in Nijmegen?

Human rights in Armenia

Armenia has Georgia, Turkey, Iran and Azerbaijan as neighbours. With the latter country, Armenia has a long-running conflict over the Nagorno-Karabakh region. Both May 2021 and November 2021 there was (large-scale) hostilities around its borders, including civilian casualties.

Human rights organisations are also concerned about arbitrary arrests, poor prison conditions, serious problems with the independence of the judiciary, severe restrictions on freedom of expression and the media, arbitrary interference with privacy, human trafficking, crimes involving violence or threats of violence against persons critical of their government.

19. Look at the map and explain a possible reason for the conflicts between Armenia and Azerbaijan.
20. What do we mean by 'arbitrary arrests'?
21. What are the most important differences in the work a human rights defender in Europe and of one in Armenia? Explain your answer.

Freedom of speech

Mamikon is chairman of the Human Rights House Yerevan, a network of organisations for the protection of human rights defenders, journalists and activists. His work is hampered by several legislative changes introduced by the Armenian government that restrict independent media and other critical voices.

In March 2021, the Parliament increased the maximum fine for insult and defamation to over 10,000 euros.

In August, another set of legislative amendments criminalised insulting public figures to a maximum of three months.

In September, under this new law, police opened a criminal case against a Facebook user for insulting the prime minister in a comment under a picture showing him.

The offices of Radio Free Europe/Radio Liberty and Open Society Foundations were looted in 2021. The government refused to investigate those lootings.

A demonstration for freedom of speech in Armenia

22. If someone insults the prime minister of Armenia, he or she can get up to three months in prison. What punishment can you get in the Netherlands if someone insults public figures like Prime Minister Rutte?

Pink Armenia

Homosexuality is a major taboo in Armenia. In a survey, 70% of Armenians say they find LGBT people 'strange'. And 55% indicate that he or she would break up the friendship if that friend comes 'out of the closet'. Many LGBT people keep their sexuality hidden from family members, friends and work colleagues for this reason. Coming out for your homosexuality can even mean losing your job or being bullied away.

In Armenia, you cannot enter military service as an LGBT person. If you do come out in favour of your homosexuality, you will be referred to a psychiatrist as 'mentally ill'.

In Armenia, there is also no law protecting LGBT people from discrimination and violence. Many LGBT people who are harassed or assaulted do not go to the police or the courts. In 2014, the newspaper Iravunk published an article with the Facebook accounts of LGBT people and called them 'zombies'. Several LGBT people went to court, but the judge ruled that the newspaper had not offended anyone and the LGBT community had to pay compensation to the newspaper.

In 2019, Justice Minister Rustan Badasyan indicated that a marriage between two women or between two men simply does not belong in Armenia.

Despite all these difficulties, the Armenian LGBT community is not giving up their fight for justice. Among them is Mamikon who founded the LGBT organisation 'Pink' (better known as 'Pink Armenia') in 2007.

Opdracht

23. Why does an LGBT person under attack in Armenia often not go to the police? Give three reasons.
24. Look at the image of Pink Armenia's website above. What objectives can you derive from this image?

Extra course material

As a preparation for the meeting with human rights defender Mamikon we came up with some questions you can ask him. Of course you can think of some question on your own that you want to ask. What would you like to know?

- * Against what human rights violations is he fighting?
- * Why do these violations take place and what can he do about it?
- * What successes has he achieved in her work?
- * He is threatened for opposing violations. How does that affect his work? Is he not scared?
- * What does the future of Armenia look like?

Text in picture: Are there any question?

Who defends the
human rights defenders?

Introduction

The course material 'Who defends the human rights defenders?' is developed by the Education group of Amnesty Nijmegen in cooperation with Shelter City Nijmegen.

Shelter City is a national initiative of Justice & Peace in cooperation with Dutch cities and the Ministry of Foreign Affairs to protect human rights defenders as initiated by a motion of the European Parliament. Human rights defenders that risk their own lives by fighting for human rights, will be provided temporary shelter in European cities.

Shelter City Nijmegen is realised by a cooperation between different organisations from Nijmegen, under which Amnesty Nijmegen, Radboud University, the municipality of Nijmegen and Bureau Wijland. Qader Shafiq of Bureau Wijland coordinates the project, q.shafiq@bureauwijland.nl.

Since 2015, two human rights defenders have been coming to Nijmegen every year. The fourth of the third series is Mamikon* from Armenia.

* For his safety we can not disclose his family name.

Structure

The course material 'Who defends the human rights defenders?' takes two lessons of 50 minutes.

Lesson 1: worksheets 1-5

Lesson 2: worksheets 6-10

The course material can be used by the teacher independently as well as by guest teachers from Amnesty Nijmegen. For guest lessons you can contact the head of the Education group: Harry de Ridder, amnestynijmegen@gmail.com.

As a follow-up, you can ask Mamikon himself to tell her story as long as he still is in Nijmegen. For that you can also contact Harry de Ridder, amnestynijmegen@gmail.com.

As preparation for a possible meeting we have prepared some question and ask the students to prepare some questions as well before the meeting.

Preparation of the meeting: worksheets 11-12

As soon as we know the identity of the following human rights defender, we will publish the next version of the course material.

Translations of the Dutch movie

Movie: Human rights of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs

Everyone is equal and has the same rights... or is that not true?

Everyone has the right to peace and freedom... or is that not true?

Everyone has the right to freedom of expression... or is that not true?

Everyone has the right to believe what they want... or is that not true?

Everyone has the right to life with who they want... or is that not true?

Justice - Equality - Solidarity - Humanity

In a humane society everyone enjoys equal rights. For that reason there is a foreign policy on human rights.

Human rights - For everyone - Always - And everywhere

Human rights

The lesson starts with discussing what human rights and human rights violations are.

1. Everyone is equal, everyone has equal rights, everyone has the right to develop in a good standard of living, everyone has the right to live in freedom and safety, everyone has the right to sufficient food and water, there is a prohibition on the use of child soldiers, nobody can be arbitrarily arrested without the family of the person knowing where they are (prohibition on disappearances), everyone has the right to life, everyone has the right to freedom of expression, torture is prohibited, everyone has the right to believe, everyone has the right to live together with whom he or she want, everyone has equal rights.
3. For example: prohibition on slavery, prohibition on the use of child soldiers.
4. Some economical, social and cultural rights are less easy to realize, think of: the right to labour. Every society copes with unemployed people.

Freedom of expression

In this part of the course material we further discuss the human right 'Freedom of expression', a condition to be able to oppose human rights violations (of others).

5. Artist: if you show art that exposes the government or makes fun of it, you risk being arrested.
Journalist: he can expose corruption or other wrongs which the risk of being arrested.
Moviemaker: similar to the journalist, but not with words but with images. A moviemaker can make fun of the government as well.
Union leader: he or she stands up for the rights of workers and stands up against the wishes of employers
6. They do not just stand up for their own opinion, but also for the rights of others.
7. A writer, blogger, cartoon artist, comedian.

Human rights defenders

We are discussing a self-made definition of human rights defenders and their characteristics.

9. After the students' opinion. A human rights defender is not superman, but someone who is not afraid to stand up for the rights of others. It takes some courage, or at least someone who is willing to take on his own fear.
10. For example: A human rights defender is someone who stands up for the rights of others (in a situation where he operates himself and where human rights are violated; someone from Amnesty who stands up for human rights in a safe environment are not called human rights defenders). A human rights defender can only be called a human rights defender if he or she does not use violence

Extra vulnerable

Human rights defenders are at great risk, especially women. Amnesty's application can help with that.

11. The work of human rights defenders is criminalized to silence them.
12. Step 1: Take the time to install the Panic Button-application in a calm situation.
Step 2: Think of the people who should be informed when action needs to be undertaken.
Step 3: Check that your phone is on, sufficiently charged and with sufficient credits (for a prepaid or contracted phone).
Step 4: Press the button of the application in case of emergency.
Step 5: Your network will be notified by text and indicate your location so that people from your network can help you fast.

Who defends the human rights defenders?

People who stand up for the rights of others are also in danger and need protection themselves.

13. According to the declaration basically everyone: individuals, groups, organisations and official institutions.
14. Both are not treaties with legal force, but declarations with no more than official promises. If the UN and the EU would contain that protection in a treaty, we could take on violators with the law or treaty in place.
15. Defamation (violate someone's honour or good name on purpose) with the goal of degrading the human rights defenders and taking away their credibility.
16. 1) physically (physical intimidation or direct threats).
2) online (digital surveillance and online threats).
3) family (physical intimidation or direct threats of family members).
4) mobile phone (surveillance of mobile phones and threats by text).

Shelter City Nijmegen / The human rights defender 'from Nijmegen'

In this part of the course material we further discuss the how and why of the Shelter City project and the human rights defender who came to Nijmegen..

17. It could be: the human rights defenders do not want to go back to their own country or the situation in their country has become so badly in those three months that they cannot go back. It could also be personal: for example when a person got into a relationship in the city where he or she temporarily lived.
18. Think of things like: a place to live, a place to work or take a course, the use of a computer, telephone, public transport card, a budget to their expenses, but also: people around them to accompany and help them.

Human rights in Armenia

The human rights situation in Armenia is not good. Human rights are violated in incidents on the border between Armenia and Azerbaijan, but also in the interior of Armenia itself. Those who criticise the government face numerous human rights violations.

19. Azerbaijan is divided into two separate territories with Armenia between them. The intermediate region of Nagorno-Karabakh is disputed by both countries.
20. By this we mean arresting someone without good reason.
21. In Europe, governments stand up for the rights of people and human rights defenders, while the Armenian government is the enabler of numerous human rights violations. Not only will you not get help from the government in Armenia, but standing up for human rights can even be dangerous for you.

Freedom of speech

Freedom of speech is limited in Armenia by several laws restricting critical people. The Armenian government does nothing against looting of media offices.

22. None. In the Netherlands, we have freedom of speech. The limit lies with defamation and slander.

Pink Armenia

Homosexuality is a big taboo in Armenia, with all its consequences. LGBT people are seen as 'strange' and they are not protected by laws. The organisation Pink (or Pink Armenia) is trying to improve that.

23. 1) The police won't do anything for you anyway. 2) It then becomes known that you are LGBT and you may lose contacts with family members and friends. 3) If it becomes known, you may lose your job.
24. Standing up for equal rights of LGBT people (the pink heart, pink = the colour of LGBT) and same-sex love and for legal acceptance (Libra is the symbol for law and justice).
